

Treating Children

written by Richard Leslie | August 31, 2021

Licensed mental health practitioners treat children both with and without the consent of one or both parents. It is not uncommon for practitioners to be uncertain about what the rights of the minor patient may be in particular situations, what the rights of a parent or the parents are, and how confidentiality and privilege are affected under particular circumstances.