Do I need to let CPH Insurance know if I've moved offices?

The short answer is: If you have General Liability, then yes. If you do not have General Liability, it may not be necessary. The long answer is as follows:

For your malpractice coverage, we only need to keep a mailing address on file. It's portable coverage and follows you wherever you can legally provide services. If your new office is where you'd like to receive mail, then please update your mailing address in your customer portal. This will ensure you receive important information about renewing your policy.

If you're not sure what you noted as your mailing address upon application, you can take a look at your Certificate of Insurance to determine. Your mailing address is what's listed underneath your name towards the top left of the Certificate of Insurance. See example below:
